of astonishment, then in dead silence. He said:

"There are two places within half a mile of where we are now where any crime from the lowest to the greatest can be bought for money, and I know it, and many of you men know it, and know the places, no doubt, and I can't touch them under present conditions. I say that to all New York, and I will prove it if they will give me the opportunity. That's one reason that I want some secret service money."
